

Come to meet part of the team in the Virtual Summer School 2022

... a few words about the lecturers

Kateřina Andršová is an assistant professor of music and coordinator of the internationalization at the Music Department, Faculty of Education, University of Hradec Králové. She received her Ph. D. in Music Theory and Pedagogy from University of Hradec Králové in 2019. She received the Student Annual Award for the academic year 2017/2018 for extraordinary creative activity in the field of science and research by the Faculty of Education at University of Hradec Králové and was also nominated for the Mayor of the City Award for student creative work in 2018. She is deeply interested in ethnomusicology, especially in music of the Romani people. She has been focusing the analysis of a collection of music recordings made by world-class photographer Josef Koudelka in Slovak Roma settlements in the 1960s.

Ludmila Kroupová is an assistant professor at the Music Department, Faculty of Education, University of Hradec Králové, Czech Republic. She received her Ph.D. at the University J. E. Purkyně in Ústí nad Labem in the field of Music Theory and Pedagogy. In her research, she focuses mainly on the field of Czech song literature in the Romantic period, with a special focus on the songwriting of the composer Antonin Dvorak. She is the author of the monograph „Antonin Dvorak’s Songs: The Analysis of Selected Cycles“. Her results in the field of upbringing and education were acknowledged by the „Pedagogical Personality of the year 2021 award“ granted by the City of Hradec Králové.

Františka Schormová is an associate professor at the Department of Anglophone Literatures and Cultures at the Faculty of Education, University of Hradec Králové, Czech Republic. She has received her PhD from Charles University in Prague with an award-winning dissertation on African American poets in Czechoslovakia. She had been a Fulbright-Masaryk Fellow at Davis Centre of Russian and Eurasian Studies at Harvard University in 2017-2018. More recently, she has also been a Patočka Fellow at the Institute of Human Sciences in Vienna and a Visiting Researcher at Northumberland University Newcastle, working on her upcoming monograph

Prague, Red and Black: Early Cold War Journeys, Networks, and Poems. Her research focuses on Cold War racial imaginaries and discourses, and translation issues in a broader sense. As an American studies scholar, she is also interested in ways to approach this field transnationally, and how to discuss US-related issues with Czech students – and vice versa.

Věra Tauchmanová is an associate professor at the Department of English Language and Literature at the Faculty of Education, University of Hradec Králové, Czech Republic. She has received her Ph.D. from the University of Hradec Králové. She was the Vice-Dean for Internationalization at the Faculty of Education in years 2002 – 2012. She has been the coordinator of internationalization at the department of English Language and Literature at the Faculty of Education. She has rich experience with teaching Czech language as a foreign language. She has been involved in numerous international projects focused on teaching languages. She is deeply interested in applied linguistics and comparative linguistics.

Daniela Vrabcová is an assistant professor of pedagogy and educational sciences at the Department of Pedagogy and Psychology, Faculty of Education, University of Hradec Králové. She has been the head of the Educational Division at the department. She has been the Vice-dean for Internationalization at the Faculty of Education since 2016. She received her Ph. D. in Pedagogy and Educational Sciences from Palacký University of Olomouc in 2007. She is deeply interested in teacher competences, intercultural education and competences, assessment for learning, educational changes, teaching practice, internationalisation, ethics education, comparative pedagogy, teaching theories. Selected further professional development: COIL Academy program of the Research Group Global Learning (joint training program of the Hague University of Applied Sciences, the Institute of Excellence in Internationalisation Project at Palacký University Olomouc, Ostrava University, and the University of Hradec Králové (2021).